Discussing weight is a heavy topic, especially when it comes to our children. TOO MUCH, TOO LITTLE: CHILDHOOD EATING DISORDERS is a documentary that explores what research is being done in our region to help children who suffer from obesity and other eating disorders like anorexia and bulimia.

Featured in the program is Dr. Dennis Styne, Professor of Pediatrics at the UC Davis School of Medicine, who talks about the dangers of childhood obesity. Children battling eating disorders tell their personal stories about trying to live healthier lives. KVIE's Jason Shoultz explores the White House garden and talks to First Lady Michelle Obama in an exclusive interview.
